National Conference on:

Issues in Media, Culture and Education

1st Edition - May 30, 2022

The Higher School of Education and Training (ESEF), Beni Mellal, in collaboration with the Research Laboratory in Literature, Language, Culture and Communication (RLLCC), is pleased to announce its first national conference on Issues in Media, Culture and Communication.

The conference aims to bring together researchers interested in issues related to education, culture as well as media in order to reflect on the state-of-the-art of current research on the above issues, and equally in order to respond to and examine the impacts of the eroding phenomenon of globalization and of the latest world upheavals that have powerfully and intrinsically reshaped our societies as well as our approaches to and conceptions of literature, culture, language, media, and education.

Language, media, education, and culture form spaces that define humans' interactions with their complex environment in a constantly changing world. How do humans reflect their ability to live in an uncertain world that the previous concepts alter and transform? How are they attesting to the limits of human beings? These are issues among others that impact media and education. Researchers are thus invited to explore the new directions and emerging trends of research in these fields. The conference will equally be an opportunity for different researchers to discuss and debate all related ideas, approaches and perceptions.

Applicants are encouraged to submit papers that address, but are not necessarily limited to, the following issues:

- Micro-linguistics
- Macro-linguistics

- Applied linguistics and education
 - Critical discourse analysis
 - ELT, literacy and adult education
 - Education during the Covid 19 Pandemic
- Literacy and Cultural Studies
- Media Studies

Submission Guidelines:

Proposals for papers should consist of a title, an abstract (limited to 250 words in length), a short bio specifying the author's current position and affiliation (limited to 100 words), and 5 key words. Individual paper sessions will be 15 minutes.

Selected papers will be published in a Special Volume of Conference Proceedings, and contributors will be notified by the organizing committee in due time.

The language of the conference is English.
